

ADDRESS CONFIDENTIALITY PROGRAMS BY STATE

WHAT IS AN ADDRESS CONFIDENTIALITY PROGRAM (ACP)? An ACP is a government-administered program designed for victims of crime and other statutorily protected persons. An ACP provides a designated substitute address that participants can use in place of their actual physical address. They also provide a mail-forwarding service and serve as legal agent to receive service of process for program participants. The intent of an ACP is to prevent a program participant's actual address from becoming publicly known with the ultimate goal of keeping the program participant safe.

NOTE REGARDING STATES WITHOUT PROGRAMS: States without a formal ACP may offer other types of confidentiality or protection for crime victims. Please contact local victim services providers in these states to learn about programs that may be offered by these states.
